Boston Police To Learn How To Prevent Clashes

A system on the problems of minority groups and racial intolerances and methods of dealing with them, believed to be the first of its type given in the U.S. will be started for Boston, Mass., Cambridge and metropolitan police in January, the Governor's Committee for Racial and Religious Understanding has announced.

The committee reported that the seriousness and danger of racial tensions in Boston had been "aggravated," but said that since many cities had experienced disturbances within the last eighteen months, it was believed best to be prepared for any eventuality.

Thomas S. J. Kavanaugh, deputy superintendent of Boston police, who will teach the course as a part of the daily policemen drill, said "the chief hope of success for the police in handling inter-group relationships lies in the field of prevention.

"The object of this course is not to tell police what to do in case a riot breaks, but to drive home the idea of being alive to any condition which may result in a clash between different racial groups and to take steps to prevent such occurrences."

The courses will be based on a series of lectures just completed at Boston police headquarters by Dr. Gordon W. Allport, head of the Department of Psychology at Harvard. Thirty Boston, Cambridge and metropolitan police officers attended the lectures. Spokesmen for Jewish, Negro and other minority groups participated in the lectures.

Haifa Harbor Workers Embrace Refugees

The Portuguese boat bringing refugee children estripped from concentration camps in Spain and France, entered the Haifa harbor with Zionist colors flying from the mast and was greeted by laborers shouting across the water greetings bearing the inscription: "Mayabesh Le'Cheruth" (From slavery to freedom). All activity ceased in the harbor as hundreds of Jewish port workers gather around the newcomers, embracing them and asking but relatives from among the arrivals. From lip to lip with intense emotion as the strains of Hatikvah broke across the harbor, and swept up the assemblage of Haifa Palestine Jews and their brethren who had fled slave camps in Hungary.

Numerous touching reunions took place on the docks. An eight-year-old girl met her father who had reached Palestine several weeks ago among endangers from Germany. She did not know he was in Palestine and their encounter was a surprise to both. A 10-year-old girl from Vienna, whom-last European "address" was in Holland, was reunited with her parents of whom she had not heard since the beginning of the war. The arrivals were taken to the clearance camp at Athlith where they were visited by David ben Gurion, chairman of the Jewish Agency Executive, and Moshe Sharett, chief of the Political Department of the Jewish Agency for Palestine.

Twenty-five youths among the newcomers, including the several who met service with the Maquis in France, immediately enlisted with the Jewish Brigade. One boy died and the only child from the group of [illegible] was left behind in a hospital in Marseilles.

Science Institute To Be Tribute To Weizmann

Plans for the establishment in Palestine of a Weizmann Institute of Science, as a tribute to Dr. Chaim Weizmann, scientist, who is president of the World Zionist Organization and of the Jewish Agency for Palestine, honored his seventieth birthday.

Edmund L. Kaufmann, president of the American Committee for the Weizmann Institute of Science, a corporation recently formed for the establishment and endowment of the institution, made the announcement.

The institute will be at Rehovoth, Palestine, the home of Dr. Weizmann and the site of the Daniel Sieff Institute, which under his direction since 1934, has conducted research work leading to important developments of new processes in the field of chemistry. The new institute will be composed of four departments devoted to research in the fields of physical chemistry, pharmacology and chemotherapy, plastics, and nutrition. The plans have been drawn up both in Palestine and the U.S. It is expected that the services of eminent scientists, mostly refugees from Europe, will be enlisted.

The necessary buildings, with their scientific equipment, and the maintenance budget for the first three years, will require an investment of $3,000,000. Under the plans of the American Committee, $2,000,000 of this will be contributed by the sponsors and friends of the project in the United States. Subscriptions exceeding $500,000 toward the American share already have been received.

"With the completion of new ... Reorganization in the leadership and direction of the American Zionist Emergency Council, headed jointly by Rabbi Stephen S. Wise, of New York, and Rabbi Abba Hillel Silver of Cleveland, Ohio, was believed likely as a result of differences arising from the recent deferral by the U.S. Senate foreign relations committee of a resolution urging free entry of Jews into Palestine.

The Council, consisting of twenty-six representatives of the four leading Zionist organizations in the U.S., is their joint political action agency. Included in the council are the Zionist Organization of America, Hadassah, Poale Zion, and Mizrachi.

Rabbi Wise in a statement disclosed that on December 15 he had submitted his resignation as co-chairman of the Council because he "could no longer remain co-chairman of a body one of whose officials, in a matter of supreme importance, had deliberately and persistently contravened decisions of the Council, with harm to the cause we serve."

Dr. Wise's resignation was presented to the Council when that body also had before it a motion calling for the resignation of all the officers to permit a reorganization. Although the motion was not acted upon, a move to have it tabled was voted down, whereupon Dr. Silver, who served also as chairman of the council's executive committee, resigned. Supporters of Dr. Silver said he had made his resignation "irrevocable."

While Dr. Wise would not discuss the situation beyond his general statement, his supporters explained that he and Rabbi Silver had disagreed on the tactics pursued in pressing the Palestine resolution before the Senate Committee. This resolution, which failed of approval by the Committee on Dec. 11, in addition to calling upon the United States to try to obtain free entry for Jews into Palestine, urged also reaffirmation of the idea of ultimate establishment of a Jewish commonwealth of Palestine.

Action on the resolution was deferred by the Senate Committee on the advice of the State Department, which in a public statement had taken the position that in passing "on the present time would be unwise from the standpoint of the general international situation, as it would be apt to ..."

Charges Anti-Zionist Campaign Among Refugees

Resolution adopted by the National Labor Committee for Palestine's twenty-first annual convention at the Hotel Commodore, in New York, called for the establishment of an independent Jewish nation in Palestine and denounced the International Refugees Commission for "its anti-Zionist campaign among Jewish refugees."

In a resolution concerning war orphans, the delegates called "the attention of humanitarian world public opinion" to the International Refugee Committee, established by the British and American governments early in the war and placed under the direction of Sir Herbert Emerson, and to its

...Up Law To Become Noted Author

Philip Guedalla, prominent English historian, biographer and essayist, who died in a hospital in London, England, at the age of 55, won many honors at Rugby School and Baliol College, Oxford University, where he prepared for law, and most of these came from his brilliant early writings. It was not surprising then, that after ten years as barrister he withdrew from his original profession to devote the rest of his life to writing.

History and biography were his chief subjects, and in these he interested wide audiences in America as well as in England because in some of his most important works, particularly in recent years, he had found a way to relate American history to the British, and to make British history and its personalities highly interesting to Americans.

In addition to his book readers here in America he was widely known to readers of The New York Times Magazine to which he was a frequent contributor under such recent titles as "Napoleon-Hitler," "Chamberlain-Pétain," "Two Nations-Two Friends," "The Rough Rider of Downing Street," "If Napoleon Couldn't, Can Hitler?", and "Roosevelt, Churchill and Hitler." He had a colorful style and was a comer of dynamic phrases.

Mr. Guedalla was born March 15, 1889, and was the only son of the late David and the late Louise Bennett Guedalla. His wife was the former Mollie Merola Rathbone. At Rugby School he demonstrated his literary facility by editing The Meteor, a school publication. At Baliol he was president of the Oxford Union Society, the university's famous debating organization, in 1910 and won another first-class honor in modern history (a subject in which he was to become famous), in 1912.

After receiving an M.A. degree in 1913, he became a barrister in the Inner Temple, retiring from the law in 1922. During the first World War he served as legal adviser to one of the British cabinet departments. In 1917 he helped to organize the Flax Control Board and was its secretary until 1920.

He ran for Parliament as a Liberal from North Hackney in 1922, North-East Derbyshire in 1923

Rabbis Express Faith In Re-Educated Germany

A re-educated German people "can in time become a worthy member of the family of mankind," the commission on justice and peace of the Central Conference of American Rabbis said in a statement.

"In considering the treatment of a defeated Germany," the statement read, "we as religious leaders first affirm our confident hope that the victorious Allies will be guided by justice rather than by vengeance.

"We believe that a re-educated German people can in time become a worthy member of the family of mankind. We accept, however, the necessity for such effective measures of control as will insure the spiritual and material changes that will prevent Germany from again menacing us a military machine to threaten the peace of the world."

The commission said it favored "the immediate and speedy trial" of Allied enemy of Germans responsible for crimes against civilians and violations of international law, and added the supporters of Hitler "have a moral obligation" to aid in restoration of territory destroyed by invading German armies.

The statement urged that the same principles applied to Germany be applied to Japan.

Refugees In U.S. Army Capture Nazis With German

The National Refugee Service, one of the constituent agencies of the United Jewish Appeal for Refugees, Overseas Needs and Palestine, has learned that several of its former clients now serving with the American armed forces have distinguished themselves under fire by using their knowledge of German to induce Nazis to give up. Fighting somewhere in France, infantryman Fred Lederman, 26 year-old refugee serving with an anti-tank company, was informed that a group of Germans had been surrounded in the Castle of Tourlaville. His commanding officer suggested that Lederman's knowledge of German might induce the enemy to lay down their arms. Notwithstanding the danger to himself, Lederman entered the castle without any arms and approached the Nazi officer in charge. Tactfully, he persuaded the German to order his men to surrender.

It was undoubtedly a difficult decision for the officer to reach, for he realized that Lederman was not only an American soldier but a Jewish refugee who had been forced to flee his native land. However, 66 Nazi soldiers and two officers came out of the castle in which they had been billeted and gave themselves up to the young refugee soldier. Lederman received the Bronze Star with a citation for this deed.

Pvt. Gerard Sachs, a refugee who was born in Silesia, Germany, joined the Army in 1943 and saw fighting in Africa and Anzio. He was one of the first Yanks to invade Southern France. During the heavy fighting which followed on the heels of the invasion, Sach's unit was ambushed by a small unit of Germans. From a captured German prisoner Sachs learned that the attacking unit consisted only of 23 men and one officer, who had among them ten machine guns, one 75mm cannon, one 40mm anti-tank cannon, and plenty of ammunition.

The private persuaded the captured Nazi to lead him to the commanding German officer. The Germans were convinced that it was futile to keep up their fire and, led by Pvt. Sachs, they surrendered. "somewhere in France." Pvt. Norbert Kraft's outfit was under attack by a German machine gun which kept up an incessant fire at the Americans. During a brief lull in the shooting, Kraft jumped to his feet and shouted in German, "We'll give you two minutes to surrender. Come out with your hands over your heads. Otherwise we shall shoot you all." The Germans came out from behind the machine gun, their hands reaching for the sky.

The Truth About The Palestine Terrorists

By Gerald Frank, In The Nation

The tragedy of Palestinian terrorism should be seen in its correct proportions. Of Palestine's 600,000 Jews, less than 2,000 are terrorists, but the entire Jewish population now suffers the ignominy of identification with terrorism. It is difficult to convey the depth of bitterness which the recent outrages have aroused here. Jewish leaders point out that the Zionist movement, from its earliest beginnings, has been on a high spiritual and moral plane and that its record of achievement in Palestine has been free of violence. That at this critical hour the movement should be perverted by men whom they describe as suffering from a type of dementia is a tragedy for them. Churchill's blunt statement in Parliament two days ago only underlines that tragedy.

Who are these terrorists? Why is it so difficult to eradicate them? They are divided into two illegal organizations, small but virulent groups fighting for the freedom of Israel — the so-called Stern gang, with 150 active members, and the melodramatic Irgun Zeval Leumi, or National Military Organization, whose active membership plus a fringe of youthful hero-worshipers is set at 1,500 to 1,700. The Stern gang is guilty of a long series of anti-British outrages, culminating in the Moyne murder. To complicate matters, it is alleged that the gang may be backed by sinister non-Jewish elements who are using it to settle anti-British scores of their own.

These two organizations, a bizarre conglomeration of youngsters in their teens and veteran terrorists, combining the technique of Chicago gangsters with the posturings of comic opera, have precipitated a crisis and dealt Zionism a damaging blow. They prey not only on the British but also on the Jewish community, using extortion, blackmail, and kidnaping to swell their treasury.

The Zionist leaders are meeting the challenge with every means at their disposal. Chaim Weizmann, who has just arrived in Palestine, is reported to be taking vigorous steps. In the past fortnight a country-wide "speak-up" campaign has been launched. Citizens are asked to come forward and tell what they know of the terrorists and their hide-outs. Organization after organization is calling on its members to do all they can. Every day in Jerusalem one sees Zionist youths pasting up posters denouncing terrorism and ripping down illegal placards.

It must be understood, however, that the terror in Palestine is not an isolated phenomenon. It is symptomatic of a disease which finds its easiest victims among Jews forced to sit idle while their relatives are massacred in Europe and their appeals to let Palestine give them haven go unanswered. It is particularly contagious among a certain type of youth for whom time and diplomacy move too slowly and who consider spectacular action better than the unpublicized constructive labor which occupies the majority of young men in Palestine.

It stems from the activist movement in pre-war Poland, which formed an extremist wing of Zionist revisionism. The revisionists preached that the way to achieve a Jewish state was through political action. That, they asserted, and not the slow process of immigration and colonization developed [illegible] revisionists and called for the use of force. The hunted leaders of the terrorists today — Nathan Friedman-Yellin, the thirty-one-year-old Sternist chief, and Menachim Begin, the thirty-five-year-old head of the I.Z.L.—are both former Polish activists. Both are so convinced that Great Britain will never permit a Jewish majority in Palestine, and that the Jews and Arabs would have reconciled their difficulties long ago if Great Britain had not interfered, that they are believed ready to accept support from virtually any other United Nations power. Beyond this, however, the groups differ sharply in their methods.

The Stern gang is a completely secret terrorist society which takes human life. Its members hide in the large cities under various aliases. No more than two or three are ever found together. It is reported that no member is acquainted with more than nine others. They operate in such successful anonymity that even their parents are frequently unaware of their activities. Many of the Sternists have been arrested before, and many are here illegally: they have the desperation of men with nothing to lose. Perhaps 8 per cent of them are Palestinian-born; the majority are Polish Jews under thirty.

The gang takes its name from Abraham Ben Mordechai Stern, an Italian-educated Polish Jew and one-time schoolteacher who had a Messianic complex, wrote lyric poetry and was impressed by Mussolini. In 1937 Stern organized a group of activists in Poland. When the war broke out, these men became part of the Polish army. They were later among the Polish troops captured by the Russians, who released them in 1941 to make their way to Europe via Palestine. In Palestine the Sternists promptly deserted. Stern and two of his followers were killed in Tel Aviv in 1942 by the British police while attempting to escape from prison. The Sternists charge that they were deliberately murdered and since that time have carried on a perpetual vendetta against the police.

The present leader, Friedman-Yellin, is square-faced, blue-eyed, bespectacled — and one of the most elusive men in Palestine. He has been arrested half a dozen times under various aliases and has a price on his head. At one time he was editor of Der Tat, a Polish activist publication; today the members of his organization are pouring out a flood of propaganda calling on the Jewish youth to "revolt." Their pamphlets find their way under the doors of many innocent householders. After each outrage they publish a leaflet justifying their action. "The Assassination of Moyne," the latest of these leaflets, announces that "two of our brave fighters for freedom were carefully selected from volunteers for an especially dangerous mission. They successfully achieved their objective and liquidated an important and vital member of the enemy forces, Lord Moyne. Our brave raiders have been captured in the course of duty."

One understands why, despite concerted appeals to speak up, the man in the street may be reluctant. It is no healthier for the Tel Aviv merchant who has been forced under threat of bodily harm to pay an "assessment" to the terrorists to "talk" than it was for a New York merchant who paid tribute to Dutch Schultz. And if anyone knows of a Sternist hideout, it takes courage to report it. Moreover, citizens point out that in 1942, with the help of the Jewish community, fifty leading Sternists were rounded up and imprisoned but that during the last year or two twenty-five of the most important have managed to break out. There is reason to be genuinely fearful of future reprisals.

Whereas the Sternists' chief weapon is murder, the I.Z.L. tries to destroy the machinery and institutions of the government — post offices, public buildings, police stations, and the like. But if its members encounter resistance, they too shoot to kill. They protest strenuously against being called terrorists. They are the Jewish maquis, they insist hotly, and they want recognition as the official military Jewish underground in a country occupied by the "enemy," that is, Great Britain. They actually formally declared war against the British administration earlier this year, and their "communiques" are couched in approved military terminology. They wear armbands and lapel insignia so that if caught placing their alarm-clock bombs they can claim they are wearing a uniform and are therefore entitled to be treated as prisoners of war. One might be inclined to laugh them off if they did not destroy property and take human life.

Menachim Begin, the I.Z.L. leader, is a thin, pale, ex-law student from the Warsaw University. He is technically still a private in the Polish army. He worked as a clerk in the office of the Polish mayor of Jerusalem until May, 1944, when he was given a year's leave of absence to carry out a special assignment. In Poland Begin was active in "Betar," the revisionist youth movement, and also in "Brith Hahayal," a Revisionist body of former Jewish soldiers who trained under Polish officers. It was revealed recently that during the period 1936 to 1939 the military training of these Polish Jews included training in terrorism and sabotage.

Whether the "speak-up" campaign will be successful remains to be seen. Within the past few weeks two hundred suspected terrorists have been arrested. According to reports, most of the information leading to their arrest came from Jewish sources. At the moment the assassination of Lord Moyne has brought home to the Jewish community the fearful lengths to which the terrorists are prepared to go, and the temper of the public is rising swiftly.

Moshe Shertok, chief of the political section of the Jewish Agency, has declared that "anti-British terrorism is the greatest danger ever faced by Zionism from within. It distorts our struggle and it threatens to destroy the very basis of our claim." Apart from the terrible moral issue involved, Jewish leaders ask how men who pretend to be serving the interests of the Jewish people now, when half of Europe's Jews have been massacred and Palestine offers the only hope of escape for the others can be willing deliberately to destroy that hope by undermining the confidence of the democracies in their great effort of national reconstruction. They regard it as nothing less than high treason.

The majority of the representatives of the Zionist Organization of America were reported to be supporting Dr. Wise, with the Mizrachi and Poale Zion behind Dr. Silver and the Hadassah representatives divided. The resolution to censure Dr. Silver came from the representatives of the Zionist Organization of America.

The conflict was described as the culmination of differences affecting basic policy that have developed during many months between the Wise and Silver factions, with Dr. Silver characterized as favoring a more militant attitude in pressing for favorable action by the U.S. and Great Britain on immigration to Palestine and the larger question of the future Palestine commonwealth.

Questioned by telephone in Cleveland, Dr. Silver confirmed the offer of his resignation but would not discuss the controversy.

alleged "cynical treatment of the returned defenseless refugees."

Even now, before the war has closed," said the resolution, "attempts are being made to restrict Jewish immigration into Palestine to arouse the feeling among those liberated from Nazi clutches that immigration to Palestine, the hope of which sustained them under the most trying circumstances, is an empty dream."

Concerning orphans particularly, the resolution argued that only Palestine could provide them "motherly love and care." The resolution asserted that "the official representative" of the International Refugee Committee in Italy "continues an anti-Zionist campaign" among refugees.

The delegates declared that world conditions now demand a Jewish commonwealth be made an integral part of the peace settlement.

They condemned recent terroristic acts in Palestine, particularly the murder of Lord Moyne, and urged that non-Jews not hold the whole Jewish people responsible for the misdeeds of individual criminals.

In his warning of a possible extermination of the Jewish people in Europe, Mr. Rabe, who was also a delegate to Atlantic City, said, "The most important thing is to save the children from the Nazi-occupied countries, because even those not exterminated will be completely lost to us by absorption into non-Jewish families. These children must be brought to Palestine and restored to a normal life."

Another Era Of Power Politics?

What's behind the international political curtain? Things of a reactionary nature have happened recently in Greece, Belgium, and Italy which should cause much concern to all who have faith in the Atlantic Charter, who believe that this war is being fought for universal freedom, who believe in the great principles of equality and self-determination of peoples.

Thinking people viewing the general international situation on the press pictures it, must be filled with misgivings. In lands liberated by the United Nations forces, we find the popular revolutionary movements directed against Nazism and Fascism are now being suppressed. The United Nations liberators seem to support governments that were in power in the era of appeasement. Many of the leaders of these so-called legitimate governments were out-and-out collaborationists!

Have the statesmen of the United Nations carved out the globe in "spheres of influence"? Surely this is not what the masses, the plain people of America and Canada, have gone to war for, unholy alliances of great powers to preserve imperialisms and power politics. All this would mean a betrayal of humanity. It spells the planting of seeds for World War III. Here we recall the words of Stephen Vincent Benet:

"We thought we were done with these things but we were wrong.
We thought because we had power, we had wisdom.
Now the night rolls back upon the West and the night is solid
Our fathers and ourselves sowed dragon's teeth.
Our children know and suffer the armed men."

And what shall we say, we Jews, at the latest treatment given by the United States State Department to the Palestine Resolution? The Senate refuses to act on the resolution by request of the administration. This is, of course, a grave disappointment of Jewish hopes regarding Palestine as the Jewish Commonwealth and this is but a symptom of democratic statesmanship in general retreat. Perhaps "the sell-out" of Poland has [illegible] Palestine resolution by the Senate For-

[illegible] stand now for a better world. We must plead that the peace which is now actually being formulated be a just and enduring peace and not a peace in terms of "power politics".

Some may argue, here are the challenging proposals of Dumbarton Oaks, a creation of the United Nations for world peace! Do not these proposals envisage a democratic world order of nations great and small? One need only seriously study the Dumbarton Oaks proposals and find that these do not propose an international order but the division of the world into three spheres of influence, each to be under the sole control of a great power. Some one has well named Dumbarton Oaks as the Dumbarton "Hoax".

The church and synagogue, the liberal forces of the democracies, must now cry out for something better, for a world of genuine righteousness and decent international relations. We must denounce with scorn the attempt of one nation to dictate to another nation. With admiration for the gallantry of the Red Army in the present struggle, we believe that no policy of appeasement should be followed in catering to whims either of Russia or Britain or the United States. A world organization can only be built on the foundation of justice and righteousness for all peoples great and small.

"The earth is weary of foolish wars.
Her hills and shores were shaped for lovely things,
Yet all our years are spent in bickerings
Beneath the astonished stars.
April by April laden with beauty comes,
Autumn by Autumn turns our toil to gain,
But, hand at sword-hilt, still we start and strain
To catch the hurt of drums.
Knowledge to knowledge adding, skill to skill,
We strive for other's goods or for our own—
And then, like cowards startled with a bone,
We turn and rend and kill . . .
With life so fair, and all too short a lease
Upon our spectral star! May, love and trust,
Not blood and thunder shall redeem our dust
Let us have peace!"

humanitarian agencies engaged in similar activities. It is also concerned with the rebuilding of the special health facilities, many of which were constructed with J.D.C. help in the past thirty years, and which the Germans have now destroyed.

At one of its preliminary objectives, the Committee will study surveys on European vital and medical statistics, housing, sanitation, and epidemic diseases. Also planned is the addition of a public health expert to J.D.C.'s overseas staff, which is headed by Dr. Joseph J. Schwartz, Chairman of the J.D.C. European Council.

Emphasizing J.D.C.'s policy of utilizing local resources in its work, Mr. Hyman pointed out that just as after the last war, the J.D.C. will work with the ORT, a Jewish organization which has a history of effective operation in the medical and child care field, especially in Eastern Europe.

In addition to Dr. Golub, the other members of the newly constituted committee are: Dr. Alfred R. Cohn, Rockefeller Institute of Medical Research; Dr. Louis I. Dublin, Statistician and Vice-President, Metropolitan Life Insurance Company and Assistant to the National Chairman of the American Red Cross; Dr. Morris Fishbein, Editor of the Journal of the American Medical Association; Dr. Ingo Goldstein, Executive Secretary, Committee on Medical Information, New York Academy of Medicine; Dr. A. J. Rony [illegible] and Boris Pregel, co-chairmen of ORT; Dr. David Davis Rutstein, Deputy Commissioner of Health, City of New York; Dr. Abel Wolman, Professor Sanitary Engineering, Johns Hopkins School of Engineering; Dr. Leon Wolman, Secretary of ORT; and Morris W. Haft, a member of the J.D.C. Board of Directors.

"Sometimes when people embrace me,
I tell them, without reason
That for what it cost you to be free,
I might have had an easier."

On Tuesday, December 19, the Montreal Gazette reported that Edward Gelber, of Toronto, vice-president of the Zionist Organization of Canada, told the Montreal Hadassah luncheon meeting that all Jews left in Europe after the war should be forcibly migrated to Palestine because anti-Semitism is now so firmly established in Europe as to make the Jews' position there untenable. Two heads over that account in the Gazette read: "Zionist Advocates A Jewless Europe"; and "Edward Gelber Presses For Forcible Migration to Palestine After War." The next day the Gazette carried an account in which Mr. Gelber said that that paper had been mistaken in reporting that he said all Jews in Europe should be removed to Palestine. Two heads over the second story read: "Forced Migration Not Zionist Stand"; and "Edward Gelber Explains Speech on Palestine Policy Held At Hadassah Luncheon."

The following is the second paragraph from the second account in the Montreal Gazette: "Mr. Gelber stated that his remarks wished to convey the following meaning: In the first place, the indoctrination of the anti-Semitic virus by the Nazis in all countries that they overran, was so powerful that many Jews would find it most difficult to reestablish their lives there once again. Further, it was not to be expected that many of them, who had suffered such great horrors at the hands of the Nazis, seeing families and loved ones slaughtered before their eyes, would find it possible to return to their original habitation."

The last line in the above account said: "No suggestion, directly or otherwise, of a forced migration was made by the speaker." This column did not hear Mr. Gelber speak and knows nothing about the "Jewless Europe" incident except that it engendered considerable shock in this neck of the woods among those who read the account in the Gazette. This column is more than willing to believe that Mr. Gelber is not a half-baked idiot, particularly since there are Zionists who have taken costly advertising pages in American newspapers to campaign for the evacuation of the European Jews to Palestine. Assuming that Mr. Gelber did not champion the same thing, this column at the moment is interested in his other argument, namely that the Jews would find it most difficult to reestablish their lives in the countries which the Nazis had overrun, because of the increased Nazi anti-Semitism in those countries.

Now, this column takes enthusiastic exception to that kind of talk in written or spoken words and in doing so has the able support of a noted Zionist in Palestine, Hugo I. Bergmann, professor of philosophy at the Hebrew University, in an article entitled "A Jewish Message To The World", which first appeared in The Reconstructionist and has been reprinted. Professor Bergmann said:

"Our writers are fond of emphasising every fact that tends to show that we stand alone, that anti-Semitism is an incurable malady, that even in a democratic and socialistic world there is no room for the Jews. This sort of thinking has characterized Zionist propaganda from the first, and to the degree that its [illegible] the present war, that the best men and women stand with us, as witness the courage shown by Dutchmen, Belgians, Frenchmen, Czechs, Poles, and even a few Germans in defending Jews, are ignored, are never lectured in our press. And so there has developed among us a sense of isolation which is dangerous."

Professor Bergmann does not assert flatly that Europe will be anti-Semitic due to Nazi teachings. He says more carefully: "One possibility is that anti-Semitism may become widespread in all countries, that there will be vast migrations of whole sections of the Jewish people . . . Should the democratic values achieve a real and complete victory, in that event, anti-Semitism, which has accompanied the Nazi-Fascist world like a shadow, will vanish from the stage. I do not assert that such a world will really come into being. But since everything in the present is mysterious and obscure, it looms at least as a possibility. . . . A liberal world will have plenty of room for Jews in Europe, especially after so many millions have lost their lives. A period of feverish reconstruction will set in with a great need for engineers, physicians, scientists, industrialists, and so on; and in that world the fact of a man's Jewish birth will not handicap him. In the early post-war years Palestine will, of course, absorb large numbers of immigrants, but most of them will be veteran Zionists and the elderly parents and relatives of residents. The young people who emerge whole and unscathed from the European hell will find a wide field of action. Palestine will also witness the exit of many who did not or could not strike root there . . . Zionist propaganda has easy going in an evil world which spews out the Jews: but our problem will then be how to win adherents in a good world, a democratic world. The Zionist slogans which have been so effective for two or three generations will then lose their cogency."

The purpose of this column at the moment is to combat the whole idea that the Jews of Europe, over whose fate so many here in Canada are so deeply concerned, are friendless to such an extent that there is no hopeful future for them in the lands of their birth. At every opportunity this column has reported whatever hopeful facts it could find to show that non-Jewish aid to Jews has saved the lives of thousands upon thousands of Jews at all risk, including the final one of life itself; to indicate what Professor Bergmann calls "a contrary trend"; to suggest that, although the Nazis have been able to eliminate millions by planned murder, they have not been able to deepen actually the hatred of non-Jew for Jew in the occupied countries where resistance to the Nazis and defiance of the Jews are all part of a whole. This column does not excuse the nationalists of suppressing these hopeful indications, exactly, but it does criticize them for ignoring them in line with the old propaganda which Professor Bergmann sees as becoming outmoded, to say the least.

This column does not speak for any one or any organization except for itself and the Canadian Jewish Review. It speaks to many, however, with special interest to the young ones. To them it says: Resist with all your might those campaigns that denote a mood of defeatism resting on the darkest side of a hard decade and more. Whatever is left of the Greek Jews after the war will be with the Greeks; the Polish Jews that remain will be with the Poles; the ruined Jewish survivors in Belgium will be with the ruined non-Jewish survivors in Belgium and so on. The Jewish remnant of whatever size has belonged in Europe for two thousand years and the majority will remain there, quite likely. They love their birth-places and have sacrificed for them and will doubtless make valuable contributions to the upbuilding of these homelands.

Students Celebrate Chanukah And Christmas Together

Catholic, Jewish and Protestant young men and women students at Barnard and Columbia Colleges in Columbia University learned about the similarities of their religious beliefs at an informal dance held in Earl Hall on the campus to celebrate Christmas and Chanukah, Hebrew Festival of Light and Dedication.

The event was sponsored by Earl Hall Society at Columbia and the Barnard Interfaith Council to mark the significance of the two holidays. The two groups had arranged lectures, discussion hours, parties and dances frequently in the past.

After the several hundred students had danced and chatted in the hall, which was decorated with a lighted and trimmed Christmas tree and a menorah, Jewish holy candelabrum, they went to the foyer below to hear the interfaith students' program explain the meaning of the two celebrations.

Rabbi Isidor B. Hoffman, counsellor to Jewish students, said that Chanukah, the eight-day festival, was akin to Christmas in that candles were lighted; prayers, songs sung, gifts exchanged and a general spirit of happiness and well-being prevailed. J. Howard Dirks, associate counsellor to Protestant students, paid tribute to Christmas as inspiring dignity in Man and the realization of the nobility of God.

They All Sang Together

By Catherine Mackenzie, In The New York Times Magazine

Some of today's children will remember that this Christmas they sang traditional songs of other races and creeds than their own. They'll remember that Negro children and Jewish children joined in singing "Oh, Little Town of Bethlehem" and "Silent Night, Holy Night," and that they all sang together Hebrew hymns of Hanukkah, the "Feast of Lights," and Negro spirituals.

They sang them again this year in the public schools of Springfield, Mass., where for years children — and parents, have shared in a holiday festival combining Hebrew and Christian music and ceremonies. Last week, in New York City, children at the City and Country School sang traditional songs of many peoples and creeds. At the Little Red School House boys and girls joined in a fifteenth-century French carol, an Italian religious song, as well as the Hebrew "Rock of Ages," and one day they'll remember that all the children learned some of the handclapping songs and joyous dances belonging to the Hanukkah festival.

Negro spirituals, Hanukkah music, as well as Christmas carols, were shared by the children this year at the Walden School, where teachers and children are drawn from different racial and religious backgrounds. The educational director, Dr. Alice V. Keliher, feels that "In their simple sharing of spiritual traditions children symbolize our faith that the peoples of the world may yet come together through the great brotherhood of democracy."

It may seem a small thing to oppose a great tide of hate and fear. But nothing we do is small, as it represents great faith.

At a time when many parents are puzzled, Dr. Keliher says, "not only over the heartbreak of war but the unnecessary conflicts following in the wake of war, this seems, of all times, the time to go back to first principles, to realize that we are all brothers, and consciously bring [illegible]

[illegible] that the phrase "peace on earth, goodwill to men" be held by some students to read instead "Peace to men of good will." Peace will come only to men of good will. Homes and school and churches, teachers, parents, everyone, have a share in creating the understanding and respect for all peoples which is implicit in the Christmas music and ceremonies and exchange of gifts. At no time of the year are we so receptive to the feeling of kinship with all peoples.

Some of today's children may one day forget that this was a wartime Christmas. They will forget the way we feel about it. And, to quote Clarence I. Chatto of the Springfield schools, "forty years from now America will be theirs."

and 1924, Rushden, in 1929 and Wilmington in 1931, but was defeated [illegible]

[illegible] published a volume of poetry and another of parodies, and a scholarly work, "The Partition of Europe 1715-1815," the research for which gave him the background for one of his best picture books, "The Hundred Years," embracing a century just beyond the one he treated in his first historical work.

His "The Hundred Years," published in the latter part of 1936, embraced the years from Queen Victoria's accession in 1837 to the death of King George in 1936. His faculty for relating the American scene with the British is illustrated in the opening of this book, when he points out that the child Victoria was notified that she was Queen of England at Kensington Palace at dawn, while it was dark in Washington, and while Martin Van Buren, newcomer to the White House, was facing a great business depression.

"The Hundredth Year — 1936," emphasized the abdication of King Edward VIII, but by relating crucial events over the world at the time, made it appear as the transition year between the old war and the beginning of the new.

Among his recent books was "Mr. Churchill," a subject he knew well, and "The Two Marshals, Bazaine and Petain." In the latter Mr. Gaudalla compared the position of Marshal Bazaine, who was tried for letting the Fortress of Metz fall to the Germans in the war of 1870, with that of Marshal Petain at the end of the Vichy Government.

He was honorary director of the Anglo-American Institute of Great Britain and chairman of the Anglo-American and Films Committee of the British Council. He was also a member of the Cinematographic Films Council of the Board of Trade and past-president of the English Hostel Association. He had been honored by King George VI with an appointment to the board of the London Hospital.

Among his other publications were "Lyrics Retired," the [illegible] of Oxford days, 1911; "Mairi [illegible]tia," verse and prose, 1911; "[illegible]pers and Supermen," 1920; "[illegible] Industrial Future," 1921; "[illegible] Second Empire," 1922; "[illegible] and Men," 1923.

Also "A Gallery," 1924; "[illegible] Council of Industry," 1925; "[illegible]lean and Palestine" (A Dialogue), 1925; "[illegible]ture), also in 1925; "Politics and the Revolution," 1926; "[illegible]ston," 1926; "Conversations," "Gladstone and Palmerston," "Bonnet and Shawl," 1926; "[illegible] Hundred Years," 1936; "The [illegible] (Wellington), 1931; "Argu[illegible] Tempo," 1940; "The Queen [illegible] Mr. Gladstone," 1933; "The [illegible] dred Days," 1938.

To allow yourself to become indoctrinated with the [illegible] that it will be impossibly harder for Jews to live in the Nazi-[illegible]pied countries after the war because of anti-Semitism is to [illegible] fellow victim to a philosophy of despair that is demoralizing. [illegible] believe that the Jewish position in Europe will be hopeless after a long and dreadful war to establish the basic rights of [illegible] belongs is to brand this conflict as a purposeless affair of [illegible] more proportions, and to lower Jewish morale to the vanishing point.

This column, for one, believes that the very violence, [illegible]gority, and bestiality of the Nazi power, at least outside of [illegible] enemy, has acted as an antidote against it. Moreover, a [illegible]tion is going on, one which involves all the unbelievable, [illegible] the old Casuistic lore used to say, "including the Jews." [illegible] heart! While there is hope there is life. To escape many [illegible] the need. To stay and work and build may turn out to be [illegible] one thing that will be required.
